Fact Sheet

Methicillin-Resistant Staphylococcus Aureus (MRSA)

What is MRSA?

Staphylococcus Aureus, often referred to as “staph,” is a common type of bacteria that is found on the skin and in the nose of healthy persons. Staph bacteria may cause Minor skin infections such as boils or more serious infections such as pneumonia and blood poisoning. Certain staph bacteria that have become resistant to first-line antibiotics are called MRSA. MRSA infections are more difficult to treat, but usually respond to antibiotic therapy. MRSA is not the “flesh-eating” bacteria.

How is MRSA spread from person to person?

MRSA is usually spread through direct physical contact with an infected person, but may also be transmitted through contact with contaminated objects or surfaces. Coughing does not spread MRSA, unless the infected person has pneumonia. MRSA cannot be transmitted through a buildings air handling systems.

How can I prevent becoming infected with MRSA?

1. Wash your hands thoroughly with soap and water throughout the day, particularly every time you use the toilet and before every meal.
2. Never touch another person’s wounds, infected skin or dirty bandages.
3. Maintain excellent personal hygiene through regular showers and by keeping your living space clean, including the regular laundering of your bed linens.
4. Don’t ever share personal hygiene items with others, including toiletries and towels.
5. Individual inmates must take advantage of daily cleaning periods. Special attention should be given to shared toilets, desks, chairs and bunk areas. Pod porters should also pay special attention to community tables and shower areas.
6. Shower after participating in close-contact recreational activities whenever possible.
7. Don’t ever get a tattoo while in Jail, use injection drugs or have sexual contact with other inmates.

Who does a person know that he/she has a MRSA infection?

Swabbing or aspirating pus from a skin infection is the most common way to detect MRSA.

Can MRSA be treated?

Strong antibiotics are usually effective in treating MRSA. Serious or highly resistant MRSA infections may require intravenous (IV) antibiotics.

Always seek medical attention if you develop a boil, red or inflamed skin, or a sore that does not go away that may look like an insect or spider bite.

When I Get Out
